Dr. Duffield to take on Role as Acting Research Co-ordinator; UofG's Dairy Research Program

I am pleased to announce that Dr. Todd Duffield (Department of Population Medicine, OVC) has agreed to take over the role as Acting Research Co-ordinator for the University of Guelph's Dairy Research Program for the next 10 months. He will be replacing Dr. Ken Leslie during his sabbatical leave.

Dr. Duffield has demonstrated great leadership in research in support of the dairy farming industry in Ontario. He has been a research leader in numerous OMAFRA/UofG projects for over ten years, in the areas of health, nutrition and reproduction in cattle. Along with his research, Todd is an associate professor in OVC teaching undergraduate and graduate courses in Dairy Health Management.

I am very pleased to have Todd in place in an Acting position for the next 10 months and look forward to his leadership in the Dairy Research Program.
