Bachelor of Landscape Architecture: BLA

As a student in Landscape Architecture, you will apply creativity and innovation to the design of outdoor spaces that are attractive, functional and sustainable. If you have creative abilities and are interested in problem-solving and communication, then consider studying landscape architecture at the University of Guelph.

Overview

Landscape Architecture is a profession committed to the creation of meaningful and vital outdoor places and to the sustainable management of our environment. Landscape architects strive to establish a balance between our use and enjoyment of the land with the conservation and health of the environment. The profession is committed to improving our quality of life by applying creative, technical and scientific skills to manage and create environments that are attractive, functional, innovative and appropriate.

The fully accredited four-year (8 semester) Bachelor of Landscape Architecture degree meets the educational requirements for entry to the professional associations of landscape architects across North America and abroad.

Highlights

- The BLA program at Guelph is internationally recognized as one of the best BLA programs in North America.
- The BLA program at Guelph has a strong national and international reputation that is based on the quality of graduates, faculty and alumni.
