Letter of Recognition for Professional & Academic Skills Development

April 7, 2011

Re: Jason Ernst

The Office of Research and the Graduate Student Learning Initiative (GSLI) at the University of Guelph have collaborated to bring together faculty and professional staff to support the development of professional and academic skills for graduate students through the Scholarly Project and Research Management Course. This 11 hour course covered topics pertinent to managing a research programme or scholarly investigation, including finance, conflict of interest, knowledge mobilization, research integrity, business development, and regulatory compliance.

This letter recognizes that Jason Ernst has completed nine of the eleven 1 hour sessions offered.

Through programs such as the GSLI, the University of Guelph demonstrates its commitment to academic excellence and to supporting the development of skills that will serve our graduate students well as they enter a profession or pursue further study.
