Multifaceted Toronto artist Margaux Williamson was known and appreciated for her brusquely beautiful paintings with peculiar storyline titles before she stopped painting in 2008 to become a filmmaker. Remarkably, her first film "Teenager Hamlet" was premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival to critical acclaim. She subsequently started a blog about movies at "Movie Is My Favourite Word" and shortly thereafter co-created the cultural review site "Back to the World". Recently the Artist in Residence at the Art Gallery of Ontario, Williamson has again returned to painting.
