Course Format: Lecture

Brief Course Synopsis:
Just as Britain cannot be fully understood without attending to the British Empire, so too British literature needs to be positioned in relation to imperial narratives and tropes. As Gayatri Spivak has said, “it should not be possible to read nineteenth-century British literature without remembering that imperialism, understood as England’s social mission, was a crucial part of the cultural representation of England to the English.” Focusing on nineteenth-century prose, we will interrogate ways in which Britishness is informed by and contingent upon imperial encounters; examine representations of non-Europeans’ experience of the British Empire; and analyze the ways in which imperial narratives identify, categorize and hierarchize non-European lands and peoples. This course is designated as reading intensive.
