Syllabus

Course description:

Critical thinking is about argumentation; it’s about the ability to recognize arguments and to assess their merits, as well as to create one’s own arguments, skills that are crucial in the practice of rationally supporting one’s beliefs and in persuading others. This introductory course in critical thinking will cover the fundamental building blocks of argument construction and criticism, with the goal of improving one’s reasoning in textual dialogue (reading, reflection, written response). While these skills can be quite formal, this course emphasizes their application to diverse practical examples, which will allow students to transfer the acquired skills to other important domains such as personal decision-making, academic/intellectual endeavours in any discipline, and sober democratic participation.

The course is lecture-based, but with ample opportunities for questions and discussion. Lectures serve to introduce students to the structure of reasoning. Weekly tutorials serve two functions:
(1) to apply skills learned in lecture to practical problems; (2) to explore problems in depth that one encounters frequently in the real world, e.g.: animal rights, the role of science in society, etc.
Together, the lectures and tutorials should serve to give students an introduction to reasoning that can be applied in any context. Lectures and tutorials are meant to complement one another.
Neither can replace the other.

Objectives:

- To introduce students to the fundamentals of argumentation
- To build up the skills necessary to critically respond to arguments, as well as to present one’s own in written form
- To practice applying these skills to diverse practical problems

Required texts:

- Online articles (URLs to be posted on CourseLink)
Grading overview:

15% Weekly tutorial assignments (best 5)
10% Online quizzes
20% Midterm exam
25% Final paper
25% Final exam
5% Tutorial participation

Course rules:
- Cell phones are strictly prohibited in lectures and in tutorials.
- The use of laptops in lectures is strongly discouraged, but if you decide to use one anyway, you must sit at the back of the room so as not to disturb others.
- The use of laptops in tutorials is prohibited, barring extenuating circumstances. If there are such circumstances, please contact your TA as soon as possible.
- If you have questions, concerns or comments, your first point of contact is your TA. If the issue persists, then please see the instructor in office hours.

Submission formatting & rules:
- 12-point, Times New Roman font
- 1" margins on all sides
- Double-spaced
- Your name, student number, course and section numbers, and the date of submission at the top of the first page
- Parenthetical citations for any quoted passages or borrowed ideas
- Full bibliographical details for any materials consulted beyond the assigned reading
- Pages stapled together
- Printed double-sided, in order to save paper
- Submissions made in person, unless express permission is given to do otherwise.
- Late submissions not accepted (i.e.: will receive no comments, and a grade of 0), except in reasonable extenuating circumstances. Such circumstances must be brought to the attention of your TA as soon as possible.
