Course Description:

What is law? What is the source of its binding power? In what way law is different from morality and politics? In what way is it similar? And other similar questions will be the focus of the course. The course is an introductory discourse on law, its theoretical underpinnings and its practical applications. We will consider various responses to the aforementioned questions from different schools of legal philosophy. The aim of the course is to familiarize the students with the historical and theoretical foundation of the concepts that ground the legal system in North America, in general, and in Canada in particular.

Objectives:

By the end of the course students:

- *should have a good grasp of the history and development of major legal concepts and theories.
- *should have a good understanding of the nature, validity and scope of the law.
- *should be able to critically analyze legal arguments in our contemporary controversies and assess their merit.

Text Book:

Classic Readings and Canadian Cases in the Philosophy of Law, Edited by Susan Dimock (Prentice Hall, 2002). Please pay attention when buying the book as the version we are going to use is the 2002 edition and not the latest version. Students are responsible for both the lecture material and the material in the textbook.

Suggested Reading:

Raymond Wacks, Philosophy of Law: A Very Short Introduction, Oxford University Press, 2006.

Evaluation:

There are three assignments for this course:

- 1) Four short quizzes each worth 15%, totaling 60% of the final mark.
- 2) The participation mark is based on activities designed around four court cases that will be discussed on Sep. 20th, Oct. 4rd, Oct. 30th and Nov. 20th. Students ought to read each case before coming to class. In the first ten minutes, I will give a brief outline of the case, divide the class into groups and pose a question about the case. The next half an hour, groups are asked to discuss the case with the aim of formulating an answer to the question I posed. The last ten minutes are spent by each student on writing the answer their group came up with on a sheet of paper that I have distributed at the beginning of the class. They should write their name, student number and their group number on the sheet. Each group collects all the answer sheets and hand them to me at the end of the class. Each participation is worth 2.5 marks for the total of 10%.
- 3) A final take-home exam in the form of essay question worth 30% of your final grade, and due on Dec. 5st. (an essay topic, details and description of the essay and its evaluation scheme will be posted on the courselink in early November)

Other Rules:

Students should have their textbook with them in every class. If I ask a student to produce his textbook and he fail to do so, for every such instance he will lose 1%.

-Late assignments or make up exams will be allowed only after an official certification either from a doctor or your program counselor is provided; otherwise a mark of zero will be entered for the assignment. (See the Addendum to Course Outline at the end of syllabus)

-Request for extension on the take-home exam will be accommodated with proper documentation (e.g., doctor's note).

-My email is mainly to be used for setting up appointments when you have a conflict with the office hours, or for emergencies to let me know that you can't make a test so that I can arrange for a make-up test. The email is not to be used to ask me what is on the next test, or what we'll be reading next class, or similar questions whose answers are provided either in the outline or in class.

-There is a two week window after each assignment when you can contest your mark. The TAs will hold office hours on the two weeks following the test to answer your questions.

-Laptops are not allowed in class.

-Cell Phones should be turned off (no texting in class). If you ignore this rule, you'll be asked to leave the class room.

-No recording (audio or visual) without the expressed consent of the instructor.
