OVERVIEW
This course will examine the foundations of the Aristotelian approach to ethics through readings from Aristotle, Aquinas, a few contemporary commentators on them, and moral philosophers carrying on the Aristotelian tradition in practical philosophy today. Aristotelian ethics grounds itself on what it is to be a good human, and so it is necessarily connected to views on human nature, which are in turn based on views of nature taken more broadly. Being human, for an Aristotelian, means being a sort of thing that is the originator of a distinctive sort change in nature: actions. A human is essentially a rational agent. Being a good human means acting well. So, we will be looking at texts that help us to understand this claim and how it informs an Aristotelian approach to ethics. Our trajectory will take us from broad concerns with nature and causality to a focus on the virtue of practical wisdom, which is the central concern of ethics as a practical science for Aristotelians. Hence, our course of study will cover these topics:

1. An overview of Aristotle on nature, causality, and substance.
2. An overview of Aristotle on the soul.
3. Ethics as a practical science.
4. Human nature as a foundation for ethics.
5. Aristotle on moral virtue.
6. Aristotle on practical wisdom as a virtue.
7. Aquinas on conscience and synderesis
8. Aquinas on practical wisdom.
9. Contemporary discussion of practical wisdom

TEXTS
The following texts are available at the bookstore:

Aristotle on Practical Wisdom, Reeve, Harvard
Summa Theologiae, vol. 36, ed. and trans. Gilby, Cambridge

If you have a different edition of the NE, it should be fine, provided there are Bekker numbers in the margins. In addition to some copy of the NE, you should have access to the rest of the Aristotelian corpus, for instance:

Though not comprehensive – this volume has everything needed, and it is an excellent translation with helpful notes and glossary:

Aristotle: Selections, Trans. and Ed. Irwin and Fine, Hackett
Generally speaking, it is helpful to consult multiple translations. What doesn’t make sense in one translation can become clear in another translation.

EVALUATION

Critical Reading Responses (25%)

Each week, you will submit a one-two page response to the reading to the Courselink dropbox. These are due no later than two hours prior to class (2:00PM), so that I can review them and address them in class. The paper must do the following:

1. Pick a sentence or two of particular philosophical importance in the reading for that class meeting.* Quote the material at the beginning of your paper. Be sure to note the page number.

2. Explain what it says.

3. Explain why it is of particular importance. In this context, “important” means that it makes a claim that is philosophically important – e.g., an argument, a philosophical distinction, a statement of methodology.

*Note that you cannot submit a paper on a reading for a previous class meeting. If you are submitting a paper for a Monday reading, it is due two hours before Monday’s class.

I will drop one of these grades to account for circumstances that arise (illnesses, etc), but I will not ordinarily receive them late or waive additional grades. I will grade these out of ten points, based on the extent to which they (a) pick out something of genuine philosophical importance, (b) cogently defend that importance, and (c) demonstrate a good faith effort to explain the meaning of the passage.
Presentations (35%)
You will each give two presentations. The presentation should consist of an explanation of some important point from the reading for that day. For instance, it might focus on a paragraph or (at most) a couple of pages, or a significant argument or claim, from one of the readings assigned for that day (at the time of signing up for the presentation, you should select both the date and the text you will be presenting on, if there is more than one text). The aim is not to be comprehensive (this would significantly detract from the quality of the presentation, in my view), but rather to clearly expound and to stimulate a good general discussion of a philosophically important section of the reading. The presenters should speak for 25-30 minutes (no longer).

Your grade on each presentation will be broken down as follows (rubric from Humboldt State University):

| Rubric for Grading Oral Presentations |
|--------------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| Below Expectation | Satisfactory | Exemplary | Weight |
| Organization | No apparent organization. Evidence is not used to support assertions. | The presentation has a focus and provides some evidence which supports conclusions. | The presentation is carefully organized and provides convincing evidence to support conclusions | 30% |
| Content | The content is inaccurate or overly general. Listeners are unlikely to learn anything or may be misled. | The content is generally accurate, but incomplete. Listeners may learn some isolated facts, but they are unlikely to gain new insights about the topic. | The content is accurate and complete. Listeners are likely to gain new insights about the topic. | 50% |
| Delivery | The speaker appears anxious and uncomfortable, and reads notes, rather than speaks. Listeners are largely ignored. | The speaker is generally relaxed and comfortable, but too often relies on notes. Listeners are sometimes ignored or misunderstood. | The speaker is relaxed and comfortable, speaks without undue reliance on notes, and interacts effectively with listeners. | 20% |

Research Papers (40%)
By the fourth week of classes, each student must submit a prospectus of around 2 pages
Outlining a proposed area of research. Failure to do so will result in a 5% reduction in your final paper grade per week that it is late.

You should aim for a topic that can be treated well in 15-20 pages. I expect that your paper will reflect that you have taken into account anything relevant from course readings and, in addition, that you will investigate relevant peer-reviewed literature on your topic.

Here are the criteria that I will employ in assessing your paper (rubric from SUNY-Buffalo Department of Philosophy):

Assignment Submission & Late Policy

All assignments should be submitted to me via email. Please submit a file in Word or Rich Text Format (no .pdf files please).

Except for the weekly critical reading responses (see above), all late assignments will be assessed a 10% penalty for every 24 hours late, except in cases of serious illness or family emergency. For weekly critical reading responses, the three dropped grades are meant to cover all circumstances. If illness or other dire circumstance will cause you to miss more than three of these assignments, please consult with me.

PARTICIPATION & CLASSROOM COMPORTMENT
Please note that this is a seminar style course, and so your participation in discussion is expected every class.

Out of consideration for your fellow students, please observe the following rules:

1. No cell phone use, including text messaging.
2. No personal conversations.
3. No laptop use, except for presentations.

I reserve the right to remove you from the classroom if your behaviour is distracting to me or other students.

E-mail Communication
As per university regulations, all students are required to check their <uoguelph.ca> e-mail account regularly: e-mail is the official route of communication between the University and its students.

When You Cannot Meet a Course Requirement
When you find yourself unable to meet an in-course requirement because of illness or compassionate reasons, please advise the course in writing, with your name, id#, and e-mail contact. See the graduate calendar for information on regulations and procedures for Academic Consideration: Click

Drop Date
The last date to drop one-semester courses, without academic penalty, is October 31. Refer to the Graduate Calendar for the schedule of dates: Click

Academic Misconduct
The University of Guelph is committed to upholding the highest standards of academic integrity and it is the responsibility of all members of the University community – faculty, staff, and students – to be aware of what constitutes academic misconduct and to do as much as possible to prevent academic offences from occurring. University of Guelph students have the responsibility of abiding by the University's policy on academic misconduct regardless of their location of study; faculty, staff and students have the responsibility of supporting an environment that discourages misconduct. Students need to remain aware that instructors have access to and the right to use electronic and other means of detection. The Academic Misconduct Policy is detailed in the Graduate Calendar: Click

Recording of Materials
Presentations which are made in relation to course work—including lectures—cannot be recorded in any electronic media without the permission of the presenter, whether the instructor, a classmate or guest lecturer.
