Instructor
Aaron has been an independent contractor, an intern, a project co-ordinator, a manager, a Graduate Student Association President, and a member of the Board of Governors, but for most of his life, he has been studying philosophy. He did his undergrad at King’s College at the University of Western Ontario, his Master’s at Katholieke Universiteit Leuven in Belgium, and recently finished up his PhD at the University of Guelph. His main work focuses on Charles S. Peirce’s theory of habit and habit formation.

Course Description
This course is an introduction to some of the basic problems of philosophy. We will read some basic texts from Plato that start us off by asking how to live a good life and then focus on the nature of justice. Next we will turn to Aristotle’s Virtue Ethics, which will help us develop that question of how to live a good life in greater detail. From there we will look at Nietzsche’s Genealogy of Morals which will help us to take a critical look at our own sense of morality. Last we will look at a contemporary understanding of the role of philosophy.

The point is to develop a set of competencies that ask us to think more critically about our activities; to ask who is involved, to what extent, who is responsible, what is the impact on my sense of self, my workplace, my society, my world? This course will ask us to broaden our scope in understanding difficult situations.

Course Goals
The main goal of this course is to give you a set of philosophical tools that will help us to understand and respond to situations that we’re facing today. Each of the following goals function as subcomponents of this main goal.

You will be able to summarize and explain the different theories.

You will be able to identify a current issue that is effecting us on either a local or a global level.
You will be able to apply the theory to this current issue.

You will be able to evaluate the effectiveness of those theories to respond to these issues. For example, are there components of the current situation that were not accounted for by a particular theory?

In each unit, you will be able to identify the theory that is being used and assess the value of that theory for dealing with a contemporary issue. In each situation, you will ask, “is this the best way to handle this situation?” This question will guide all inquiry and require that you critically assess and contrast different responses to the situation.

A Note about the course

There are certainly going to be times when you have a lot of work due and other times when there is not quite as much work to do. Make sure you plan well in advance so that you are not caught off guard.

According to Senate guidelines, this course should require 10-12 hours of work per week. There are some weeks that will require more work, and others less. If you find yourself only spending a few hours one week, then you should prepare to spend approximately 20 hours the following week.

Online courses are unique in that they afford you the opportunity to work when it most benefits you. I find that some of my most productive work hours are before 9am and between 6 and 8pm. It would be good to ensure that you set aside some time each day to work on this course. It is quite easy to fall behind and end up missing some of the deadlines.

The most successful students will keep on top of the readings, look ahead to assignment deadlines, and actively participate in online discussions.

It would be quite easy to be swallowed up in a large online discussion, so we have elected to divide you up into smaller discussion groups. The hope is that, in these smaller groups, you will help each other with the readings and provide a community to help ideas grow.

I am happy to hear any and all feedback you have about the course. For instance, are there certain readings that you particularly enjoyed or didn’t like so much? Let me know. I’m always looking for ways to improve.

Course Structure
The course will proceed chronologically. We will begin by looking at Plato, then Aristotle, Nietzsche, and a contemporary thinker.

The class will be divided into groups of 5-10 students depending on the enrolment in the course (a higher enrolment will mean more students per group). These groups will be randomly selected and are closed to non-members of the group.

Groups

You will be assigned to a group before the beginning of the course. Create a name for your group, something that reflects your members. This will be used to identify you on your assignments. The purpose of the group is to assign you to a smaller group than the entire class. These groups will allow you to get to know a small section of your classmates in a way that being swallowed up in a group of a hundred students wouldn’t permit. Only your group members will be able to see your posts and you will use your group to help edit your papers before you hand them in.

The more that you work with your group, ask questions of your group, and help to answer those questions, the better you will understand the material and the higher mark you will likely get. I strongly encourage you to develop conversations in your group posting area and not just post your answers there once a week.

For more detail information about weekly posts, essay assignments and the exams see the Assignments tab above.

Weekly posts (12 x 2%)

These are questions from the readings. A minimum of two posts per week is required by each student: one by Friday at midnight and the other one by Sunday at midnight.

The first post needs to

1. answer the discussion questions and
2. include a quote from the text and
3. state whether you agree or disagree with the theorist and why.

The second post is a response to someone else’s post stating that

1. you agree or disagree with what the other person has said and
2. why you agree or disagree.

If your first post has all three components and your second post has both components, then you will receive 2% for that week.

Here are a couple of good resources for creating good discussion posts:

One by our office of open learning:
http://www.open.uoguelph.ca/online/learning_resources/online_discuss_tips.html

One by the Centre for Teaching Excellence at Waterloo:
http://cte.uwaterloo.ca/teaching_resources/tips/online_discussions_tips_for_students.html

Your first post must be submitted by 11:59pm on the Friday of that week and your second between Friday at midnight and Sunday at 11:59pm of that week. For example, the first discussion post for the first week is due on May 18th by 11:59pm and the second post must be between May 18th and 20th and before 11:59pm on the 20th. Late posts will not count unless this has been discussed in advance with the instructor.

Assignment (25%)
Application of a theory to a particular situation. Research a situation and apply a theory to that situation. For instance, you could pick a particular country’s uprising in the Arab Spring. The Crito reading would be very helpful to examine the nature of justice. Or perhaps you want to look at bullying and how Nietzsche would address this issue. In each case you are to take the theory as the background, define basic concepts, and apply those concepts to the problem.

Assignments will be no more than 1500 words long, double-spaced. More details will be provided during the first week of the course. Assignments are due on the Sunday of week 10 by 11:59 pm. Late assignments will be penalized 2% for the first day and 4% for every following day. Assignments that are late more than seven days will not be accepted.

Submitting Assignments
The case studies for this course will be submitted electronically via the course website through the Dropbox tab at the top of the screen. Please save your text documents as Word documents or Rich Text Format before you submit them.

File Name Tip
Start a new file in your word processor and save it as (the number of the assignment) e.g. #1_LastName_FirstName.rtf. Using this system Jane Doe's first assignment would be saved as #1_Doe_Jane.rtf.

Return of Graded Assignments
Unofficial assignment marks will be available in the Grade section of the course website. Feedback on assignments will be returned online via the Submit tab or the electronic drop box under the Submit tab (see the menu bar at the top of the page).

Midterm (25%) Final Exam (26%)
The midterm and final exam will be take-home exams. You will have 24hrs to complete the assignment.

The purpose of the midterm and final exams are to test your familiarity with the material and the ability to quickly respond to a contemporary situation. This situation will be pulled from the media. You will be given the situation and asked to respond to that situation. For instance, how would one of the authors respond to the situation in Syria, or the idea that Canada should not be involved with human rights issues in Asia? I will make sure that the questions that you must answer in the midterm and final will have a very clear connection to the readings that we have done throughout the course.

More details will be provided during the first week of the course.
