1 Course Details

1.1 Calendar Description

This course considers how the practice and reception of the visual arts intersect with constructs of gender in contemporary and historical contexts.

Pre-Requisites: 10.00 credits including 2.00 credits in Art History.

1.2 Course Description

An analysis of Indigenous women's critical theories as they pertain to Indigenous contemporary arts.

This course will introduce students to key theorists and central theoretical approaches that have shaped the way scholars in the field of Native Studies think about what theory is, what are its purposes, and what we want to do with it as members of communities, academies, workplaces and as individuals. Specifically, we will examine the work of Leanne Simpson, Alex Wilson, Audra Simpson, and others. We will consider how Native Studies scholars have taken up the work of these thinkers in order to examine difference, inequality, culture, history, governance, and social movements in Indigenous contemporary arts contexts. We will work across studies of gender and sexuality, culture, race and ethnicity, and settler colonialism, to understand the influence, value, and limitations of these theorists' work in a contemporary arts context.

7.5 Accessibility

The University promotes the full participation of students who experience disabilities in their academic programs. To that end, the provision of academic accommodation is a shared responsibility between the University and the student.

When accommodations are needed, the student is required to first register with Student Accessibility Services (SAS). Documentation to substantiate the existence of a disability is required; however, interim accommodations may be possible while that process is underway.

Accommodations are available for both permanent and temporary disabilities. It should be noted that common illnesses such as a cold or the flu do not constitute a disability.

Use of the SAS Exam Centre requires students to book their exams at least 7 days in advance and not later than the 40th Class Day.

For Guelph students, information can be found on the SAS website

For Ridgetown students, information can be found on the Ridgetown SAS website

7.6 Academic Integrity

The University of Guelph is committed to upholding the highest standards of academic integrity, and it is the responsibility of all members of the University community—faculty, staff, and students—to be aware of what constitutes academic misconduct and to do as much as possible to prevent academic offences from occurring. University of Guelph students have the responsibility of abiding by the University's policy on academic misconduct regardless of their location of study; faculty, staff, and students have the responsibility of supporting an environment that encourages academic integrity. Students need to remain aware that instructors have access to and the right to use electronic and other means of detection.

Please note: Whether or not a student intended to commit academic misconduct is not relevant for a finding of guilt. Hurried or careless submission of assignments does not excuse students from responsibility for verifying the academic integrity of their work before submitting it. Students who are in any doubt as to whether an action on their part could be construed as an academic offence should consult with a faculty member or faculty advisor.
