

Local Meets Global: Studies through space and time

March 21, 2026
Waterloo, Ontario, Canada

Call for Submissions

This year's theme centers on the diversity of methods used to explore the past and the consideration of time and space as part of historical inquiry. How does our work as scholars engage in questions of scope and scale?

Submission Requirements

Papers, panels, and posters covering a range of historical periods and perspectives will be accepted. We encourage submissions that address the conference theme "Local Meets Global" and consider how space and place have shaped the past.

Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- * Activism and Politics
- * Gender and Sexuality
- * War and Society
- * Economics and Trade
- * International Relations
- * Culture and Identity
- * Research Methods
- * Digital History
- * Ecology and the Environment
- * Science, Medicine, and Technology
- * Legal and Criminal Histories
- * Religious and Spiritual Movements
- * Colonization and Decolonization
- * Historiography and Epistemology

Interested applicants are invited to submit proposals for papers, panels, posters, and roundtables with an abstract of 250 words and a short biography of 150 words.
