Summary
In this video, past Micro-Tyco participants talk about their experience with the project.

Transcript
Kevin: The Micro-Tyco project has given me a large sense of pride. Pride in myself, pride in my product, and most importantly pride in my team.

Josh: Micro-Tyco kind of opened our eyes to charity and the concept of microfinance loans. It taught us so much about how useful it is in developing nations.

Nicholas: Now that I have learned about microfinance loans, I’ve now started to get involved with a new charity that is starting up in Africa to support Sudanese refugees.

Shelby: It’s taught me that any idea in the business world is definitely worth putting the time and effort into if you’re really if that’s something that you really want to do

Sydney: Micro-Tyco really changed my view from the consumer side to the entrepreneurial side and the ins and outs of what it takes to really run a business.

Ola: One of the things this competition has really helped me improve on is definitely my public speaking. I remember practicing with my group and we couldn’t get though it even once and the fact that they were there for me really helped me and encouraged me to develop those skills.

Alisha: My favourite thing about Micro-Tyco was definitely meeting my teammates. If it wasn’t for them, I don’t believe we would be as successful.

Josh: It kind of confirmed for Nick and I that business was really the right field to go into from how much we enjoyed doing the project.

Mikaila: If this was a school project, I cannot wait for real life.
