Course Overview

This course is a study of the evolution of the world economy since 1850. Topics include: the costs and benefits of empire and free trade, industrialization patterns, nineteenth-century trade and foreign investment, international monetary policy and institutions, the economic effects of war, reparations and war debt, immigration, agricultural production, origins of the Great Depression, the 1945-1973 boom in world production and trade, and subsequent economic developments. Seminars will follow a theme of health and economic development.

Student Responsibilities

Students are expected to prepare for lectures and seminars by studying the assigned readings, taking notes, and keeping abreast of information posted on the course website (see “CourseLink/Blackboard/D2L” below).

Required Textbook

James Foreman-Peck, A History of the World Economy: International Economic Relations Since 1850, second edition (1995) (Harvester, 1995) HC54.F565 1995 (available as e-book)

Online Readings

Additional and seminar readings will be posted on Blackboard (or placed on reserve in the library).

Evaluation

Students will be evaluated with one mid-term test, one 2500-word essay, seminar participation, and a final review essay. Instructions and guidelines for the essay, test, seminar participation and exam will be given in class and posted on Courselink. N.B. All assignments will be completed on an individual basis (not group work).
