THE CHALLENGE IS UNPRECEDENTED. SO IS THE OPPORTUNITY.

Welcome to graduate studies at the University of Guelph, one of Canada’s most innovative universities. As a leading research institution with specialized professional programs, U of G offers an inclusive community that prepares graduate students to Improve Life.

We bring a global outlook and an interdisciplinary approach to addressing some of the world’s most intriguing and multifaceted challenges. Here, you will study and learn with award-winning faculty members in a community that nurtures groundbreaking research and scholarship in the arts and sciences, engineering and business, feeding the world and caring for our planet.

Our collaborative learning environment has prepared numerous U of G alumni, including the outstanding graduates featured in this handbook, to make a difference in an ever-changing world. The support and opportunities they received here have allowed them to go beyond expectations and to make their mark in ways well beyond their imagining.

If you’re looking to Improve Life, look to graduate studies at the University of Guelph.

Dr. Ben Bradshaw
Assistant Vice-President
(Graduate Studies)
Improve life as a graduate student at U of G.

The University of Guelph's rich and collaborative graduate studies experience is unlike what one might expect from an institution with such a profound legacy of success. Your studies and the knowledge that you create are the primary focus of everyone here. Our support is both academic and cultural, and inclusive of all students and faculty. We are competitive but never at the expense of the outcomes you pursue. Graduate studies at U of G is a community. Our shared purpose is to improve life, and we start by improving the environment in which you learn and explore.

An Economist: Her answer to “what do you want to be when you grow up?”

Even at age 17, Edwige Tia wanted to be an economist. It only sounds surprising when you learn she’s from one of the poorest countries in the world. Making a difference economically for others back home is how Edwige will improve life.

“If my research leads to better policy, farmers at home will have better opportunities to own land, boost agri-production and keep some of it for themselves,” says Edwige. “It’s all about the dirt – access to land improves food security, equity and even national security.”

U of G’s approach to collaborative international development gave Edwige the opportunity to work with peers and professors in other fields: in sociology, rural planning and political science. “I was able to share ideas and confront issues across boundaries,” she says. “One person can make a difference in the world. I shared my research in Washington at the World Bank last spring – that’s how much opportunity the University of Guelph makes possible.”

The journey from animal health to human health.

U of G faculty member and surgical oncologist Dr. Michelle Oblak is on a mission. In part, to inspire and shape young veterinarians, and also to provide pet parents new options when cancer is discovered.

“My research goal is to impact human medicine by translating what I learn in animal oncology,” says Michelle. “We share advances in human treatment and apply that learning to dogs, where the cancer process is similar. This means our animals have more access to treatment than they would normally receive and, in turn, we apply what we discover back into human medicine.”

“U of G helps me improve life because it is an amazing network of support and creativity. A big part of that is the people I work with here. Having a graduate degree from OVC has opened many doors for me in the academic community and beyond.”

“My research examines Canadian newspaper coverage of police officers accused of professional misconduct. It seeks to uncover the underlying ‘frames’ that the media use to influence the public’s perception of police officers. By understanding how police error is portrayed in the media, my study allows us to pinpoint systemic failures that may inform policy and training initiatives that would improve the transparency of the police in Canada.”

“Phosphorus is the cause of eutrophication in surface waters which leads to algae bloom. My research centres on controlling phosphorus loss from agricultural lands into surface waters. Controlling phosphorus loss and eventual algae bloom means reducing the negative impacts of eutrophication, which includes: water quality reduction, unpleasant odours and scum, unsafe water for drinking, and also poses danger to animal life. If these effects are controlled, then communities around these bodies of water will have good sources of drinking water for them and their livestock, and as well enjoy the aesthetic value of the lake.”

City of Guelph

A great university within a great city.

Welcome to one of Ontario’s fastest growing, best-run cities: Guelph, Ontario. This is home to our 350 hectare, award-winning campus – in many ways, it becomes your home when you enroll at U of G. What we’ve learned when speaking to Alumni is that the city, its warm embrace and the relationships generated here stick with you long after you leave. The local lifestyle is progressive as is the local economy. With over 133,000 people living here, you get the vibe of a major community and the welcome of a smaller town. The architecture is rich, the legacy and cultural diversity is strong, and the community is connected, both in spirit and by an extensive transit system.
