Employee Assistance Program

From time to time, employees may find themselves in need of confidential, professional counselling for personal, family, relationship, and wellness issues adversely affecting work performance or threatening to do so. The purpose of the University's Employee Assistance Program (EAP) is to help meet these needs.

Eligibility

Eligibility for EAP counselling has been expanded to encompass not only regular full-time employees, but also their immediate family members. Ordinarily, this includes spouses and dependent children living at home. Normally, the University will absorb the costs of up to six hours of counselling per client per 12 month period. If a counselling appointment is missed or cancelled without 24 hours notice, the client may be charged.

Accessing your EAP

Access to counselling is available 24 hours per day, seven days per week through the University's EAP provider, Homewood Employee Health [1] toll-free at 1-800-663-1142. Assistance to access EAP can also be arranged through Occupational Health & Wellness at ext 52133.

Services Available

Clients will be referred to a broad range of diversified counselling specialists and may choose to consult with either a male or female professional. Services are available in many languages and are provided at numerous locations to enhance client privacy and convenience. Whenever possible, appointments will be arranged outside of normal working hours.

Confidentiality

Confidentiality is an essential feature of the University's EAP. Homewood Employee Health and its counselling professionals will not compromise the anonymity of EAP participants or disclose details of counselling sessions without clients' written consent. Correspondence and invoicing from Homewood Employee Health to the University will not include names or employee identification.

Voluntary and Mandatory Referrals

Voluntary employee referrals to EAP counselling are those through which an employee seeks to resolve difficulties in a discreet manner, often before job performance is an issue. They may also include situations in which a supervisor encourages an employee to seek counselling for a social/health issue identified by the employee as a factor contributing to declining job performance.

Involuntary (mandatory) referrals are those through which an employee is required to participate in EAP counselling as a condition of continued employment with the University. In such cases, the University reserves the right to confirm the employee's regular attendance at counselling sessions.

Employees receiving EAP counselling are expected to maintain job performance and attendance at levels acceptable to the University.