

Scholarship Handbook

A quick guide to scholarships and awards available to graduate students in the College of Biological Science

Dear Graduate Students,

Welcome to CBS! We are excited to share a journey of learning and discovery with you over the next few years.

We have prepared this Handbook to help you navigate the several scholarship and award opportunities that are available to you as a graduate student in CBS. Scholarships are diverse with regards to amount, requirements, sponsor, eligible program, and disciplinary area of research, among other characteristics and criteria.

Our aim is that this Handbook will help you quickly identify the scholarships and awards you may apply for. With this in mind, we have organized this Handbook in two sections. First, you will find scholarship summary tables, which you can skim through to check for main eligibility criteria. Once you have identified scholarships you may be eligible for, you can proceed to the second section where we highlight the most important requirements for each opportunity and indicate where you can get more detailed information to start preparing your application. Additional funding opportunities for international students and to offset expenses due to personal circumstances are also included in this Handbook. We encourage you to revise this document on a regular basis during your studies in CBS.

While this Handbook is a great compendium and starting point to familiarize yourselves with various scholarships and awards, we nonetheless suggest that you visit the Office of Graduate and Postdoctoral Studies website and the University of Guelph Award Database to ensure you have the most accurate and up-to-date information.

If you have any questions about scholarships and awards, please do not hesitate to contact your faculty advisor or our Office (cbsadr@uoguelph.ca).

Wishing you an enriching graduate student experience ahead,

Dr. Graham Holloway

Associate Dean, Research and Graduate Studies

Dr. Sarah Bates

Manager, Research and
