Time: Tuesday and Thursday 1:00 – 2:20 PM  Location: TBA

Professor: Dr. Deidre Rose  Office: TBA

Course Description:

This course will examine some of the basic concepts that contribute to various anthropological approaches to the study of culture and society, such as the case study method and participant observation. The development of theory and methods will be examined through reading contemporary ethnography. Theoretical orientations from functionalism to feminism and postmodernism will be included. Particular focus will be on ways of conducting research, styles of ethnographic representation, and ethics. The primary focus of the course will be an examination of the relevance of anthropology to the understanding of contemporary issues.

Evaluation:

- Analysis Assignments (2 @ 2 pages, 15% each)  30%
- Term Tests (2, in class)  30%
- Final Exam (during exam period)  40%

Format:

ANTH2160 is a lecture course and the content of lectures and select documentaries constitute part of the required material for purposes of tests and exams. Brief lecture outlines will be available on Courselink and are meant to help students take notes, these outlines do not replace attending lectures.

Required Readings:

Readings will also include a selection of online journal articles available through Courselink and/or ARES.