Winter 2019
Instructor: Katrin Roots

SOC 4200*03 Advanced Topics in Criminal Justice

Course description: This course critically examines the issue of human trafficking exploring its nuances and criticisms and the ways in which trafficking has come to be governed. The course investigates the intersection of trafficking with a wide range of topics including: sex work, migration, border control, human rights, modern-day slavery, policing and prosecution. Students will engage in a close reading of interdisciplinary critical scholarship while paying attention to the interplay of race/ethnicity, class, gender and sexuality. Evaluation will be based on one reading reflection, research proposal and paper, a seminar lead and class participation.